Experimental Constitution-Drafting Workshops

2-4th of July 2026, Dublin (Ireland)

Dates: You will participate in one full-day workshop on the 2nd (Thursday), 3rd (Friday) or 4th of July 2026 (Saturday).

Time: The workshop will last for a full day. We still start at 9am and finish at 6pm. There will be a longer lunch break, as well as shorter tea breaks. Lunch and tea/coffee will be provided.

Location: Our workshop will take place in an academic setting in central Dublin. The specific location will be shared after you accept your invitation.

Workshop: This workshop is part of a series of experiments testing a new sequence of constitution drafting. The expert drafting workshop is part 2 of this sequence and explores three different approaches to drafting. You will be allocated to one group of 10 legal experts.

Logistics: Unfortunately, we cannot support accommodation or travel costs financially. However, we will be able to support the search for accommodation or transport if needed, and the participant booklet will include more information on this. Please approach us via email if you have any questions or concerns.

RSVP: Please tell us whether you would like to attend until the 15th of May. If you are only available on specific dates or you simply prefer a specific date, please tell us this in your email.

Pre-Workshop: There will be a short online workshop to prepare you for the drafting session that will take place in June. You will also receive briefing material via email beforehand.

Post-Workshop: Participants from the workshop will be invited to co-author a summary guideline paper about constitution-drafting after the workshop, reflecting on their experiences and sharing their expertise in a published policy brief. This is optional and is not tied to your participation in the workshop.

Please RSVP by sending an email with your preferred workshop date to l.klatt2@universityofgalway.ie until the 15th of May 2026.
